Top Ten Ways to Save Money on Your Next Event

10. Create edible centerpieces. A great caterer can create beautiful and enticing centerpieces, either appetizers or desserts that will serve as something both beautiful to behold and edible to eat. Getting a dual function out of your centerpieces can save you $50 or more per table.
9. Don't rent an expensive hotel. Look for off-beat locations that may be a great value. Consider booking space at your local synagogue or even tent your backyard.
8. Use an electronic invitation. Many of today's guests care less about the formality of an event and more about the "fun" and "spirit" of the event. Give your guests what they want (a great, fun, memorable day) and worry less about the "formalities."
7. Use a caterer that will allow you to supply your own wine, beer, and liquor – Smokey Joe's does.
6. Ask several friends to take digital photographs from different angles. Today's digital technology creates great pictures. You can get many candid photographs this way and the technology to create a digital album or order extra prints has never been easier.
5. Join Smokey Joes email list and receive additional coupons for catering.
4. Be selective in your guest list. Many people know that today's economy means tighter guest lists. Some of your more removed friends may not be expecting an invitation.
3. Use premium plasticware instead of china. This is easy to do at a Bar or Bat Mitzvah, especially an event that is less casual than the more extravagant parties of yesteryear.
2. Have your kids make the party favors. No, your 12-year old can't start silkscreening T-shirts. Still, there are many activities that your kids can do together that will make the weeks leading up to your party a fun, family activity.
